

Leader's Guide to Energizing and Motivating Others

BRAVO (Building Relationships And Valuing Others) Program
Enriching Relationships, Deepening Engagement and Promoting Productive Attitudes for Service Excellence!

About Your Presenter

Peter Davison is an international motivational speaker, training leader and author whose tales and tools enrich relationships, deepen engagement and promote productive attitudes for greater individual, organizational and community prosperity.

Peter is driven by his passion for helping people work together for the greater good. His life work is dedicated to increasing the innerwealth of servant leaders with proactive solutions that tame innerkill YAKS like stress, stinking thinking, disconnection and disengagement, that all too often implode good people and good organizations.

Peter's speeches and programs explore seven keys of service excellence to maximize the culture of human potential. His audiences include Los Angeles gang members, emerging leaders in Northern Ireland and front-line professionals and management helping others through corporate, public sector and non-profit organizations.

Peter has celebrated the joy of speaking and the business of making a difference since 1985. Peter has been quoted in Oprah Magazine, is living with Parkinson's disease and is proud to be first-time Dad at age 50. Peter's energy comes from chocolate and his passion for helping people love who they are, who they're with and what they do with their talents in order to leave a job well-done and have more joy to take home to their family.

Two Directions of Motivation

Away from/Avoid Pain > Towards/ To seek Pleasure

Three Forces that Drive Motivation

FEAR (False Evidence Appearing Real)

GUILT

LOVE

Three Values That Unite Humanity

1. To Love and Be Loved
2. To Do Right By Your Family
3. To Make a Difference with Your Time and Talent

Four Dimensions of Energy and Motivation

1. Physical Our ability to stay on top of our game in all areas of life is determined by how much joy juice and personal magnetism we can create and channel. Results include more happiness to share with our friends and family.

2. Emotional Our choices in relationships with others affect our capacity to inspire honesty, dissolve resistant tension, care with a big heart and enrich harmony to achieve greater peace of mind, respect, devotion and results. Remember that difficult people are not failed attempts at being you.

3. Mental Our attitude determines our altitude and our mindsets determine how we stress smart, manage change, engage problems, treat others, step towards the future and foster creativity. Attitude is contagious, let's make ours worth catching.

4. Spiritual Your legacy as an unsung hero is grounded in your dedication to serving something bigger than yourself. When you honor and align your talents, skills and values to a collective cause you inspire loyalty, compassion and hope. Everyone has an instrument to bring to the vast orchestra of humanity – play strong!

(Be more with) Presence - Discipline to focus on life force energy in the moment.

(Feel more with) Passion - Measured by desire to create opportunities to express your values.

(Serve more with) Purpose - Crystal clarity of knowing what you are doing and for whom.

STRESS MASTERY: TEN SELF-CARE TECHNIQUES

It's all about energy management.

We can define energy as the capacity to do work because everything we do requires an investment of our energy, interacting with colleagues, making important decisions, or spending time with our families. All requires some form of physical, mental or emotional energy. As obvious as this seems, we often overlook its importance personally and professionally.

Every one of our thoughts, emotions and behaviors has an energy consequence, for better or for worse. The ultimate measure of our lives is not how much time we spend, but rather the quality and quantity of energy we invest in the time that we have.

Stress can be an important source of energy. Many people don't realize it, but stress is a creative tension that is a very natural and important part of life. Without stress there would be no life at all! We need positive stress (eustress), but not too much stress for too long (distress). Our body is designed to react to both types of stress. In fact the mere thought of a stressful event is enough to create neuropeptides that stimulate our response. Eustress helps keep us alert, motivates us to face challenges, and drives us to solve problems. These low levels of stress are manageable and can be thought of as necessary and normal stimulation.

Distress, on the other hand, results when our bodies over-react to events. It leads to what has been called a "fight or flight" reaction. Such reactions may have been useful in times long ago when our ancestors were frequently faced with life or death matters. Nowadays, such occurrences are not usual. Yet, we react to many daily situations as if they were as absolute as life or death issues. To our lower mind, we really don't know the difference between a saber-toothed tiger and an employer correcting our work. It is how we perceive and interpret the events of life that dictates how our bodies react. If we think something is very scary or worrisome, our bodies react accordingly. But what if 90% of distress was the result of an imbalanced perception, a lopsided thought?

When we can find the balance, we can view something as manageable and our body doesn't go haywire; it remains alert, but not alarmed. The activation of our sympathetic nervous system (a very important part of our general nervous system) mobilizes us for quick action. The more we sense danger (social or physical), the more our body reacts.

Problems can occur when over activation of the sympathetic system is unnecessary. If we react too strongly or let the small over-reactions (the daily hassles) pile up, we may run into physical, as well as psychological, problems. Gastrointestinal problems (e.g., diarrhea or nausea), depression, or severe headaches can come about from acute distress. Insomnia, heart disease, and distress habits (e.g., drinking, overeating, smoking, and using drugs) can result from the accumulation of small distress.

What we all need is to learn approach matters in more realistic and reasonable ways. Strong reactions are better reserved for serious situations that are truly life or morally threatening. For all the rest of our worries and concerns let's try to find the balanced mind in all situations by stepping back to find the benefits of each experience. We can only truly manage reactions when we can see both sides of the situation in everyday issues that we all have to face.

Below are situations that cause eustress in some and distress in others. Imagine yourself in each one right now. Are you feeling like reacting or can you see at least 3 positives of the scenario to come to balanced mind/peace of mind?

- Driving your car in rush hour
- Getting a last minute work assignment
- Having something break while using it
- Dealing with incompetence at work
- Being blamed for something
- Waiting in a long line at the grocery store or bank

HEALTHFUL HINTS TO AVOID DIS-TRESS

Busy or Active? Reacting or responding? We need to modify our over-reactions to situations. Rather than seeing situations as psychologically or physically threatening and thereby activating fight or flight lower brain, we need to engage balanced thinking and engage and respond more mindfully with more of the conscious high brain. The following suggestions are designed to reduce this dis-ease and dis-tress and recover energy. Try them. They work!

Learn to Relax. Throughout the day, take "minibreaks" and never skip lunch. Sit, get comfortable, slowly take a deep breath in and exhale very slowly. Counting as you inhale and exhale improves mindfulness. At the same time, let your shoulder muscles droop, smile, and say something positive like, "I am r-e-l-a-x-e-d."

Sleep Better. In an average life time we spend 26 years trying to sleep yet 60% of Canadians do it poorly. Visit www.peterdavison.ca/tools.html to download a free copy of the seven steps to wake up happy.

Practice Acceptance. Many people get distressed over things they won't let themselves accept. Often these are things that can't be changed, like another persons feelings or beliefs. We only want to change what we don't understand. The quickest way to appreciate something is to find the benefits or at least put energy on the stuff that matters most. Knowing what to stand up for and what to let go helps you manage stress effectively.

Talk Rationally to Yourself. Ask yourself what real impact the stressful situation will have on you in a day or a week and see if you can balance each negative thought with its opposite. Think through whether the situation is your problem or the other's. If it is yours, approach it calmly and firmly; if it is the other's, there is not much you can do about it. Rather than condemn yourself with hindsight thinking like, "I should have ...," think about what you can learn from the error and plan for the future. Watch out for perfectionism - set realistic and attainable goals. Remember, everyone makes errors. Be careful of procrastination - breaking tasks into smaller units will help and prioritizing will help get things done.

Get Organized. Develop a realistic schedule of daily activities that includes time for work, sleep, relationships, and recreation. Use a daily "things to do" list. Improve your physical surroundings by cleaning your house and straightening up your office. Use your time and energy as efficiently as possible.

Exercise. Physical activity has always provided relief form stress. in the past, daily work was largely physical. now that physical exertion is no longer a requirement for earning a living, we don't get rid of stress so easily while working. It accumulates very quickly. We need to develop a regular exercise program to help reduce the effects of working. It accumulates very quickly. We need to develop a regular exercise program to help reduce the effects of stress before it becomes distress. Try aerobics, walking, jogging, dancing, swimming, and the like.

Reduce Time Urgency. If you frequently check your watch or worry about what you do with your time, learn to take things a bit slower. Allow plenty of time to get things done. Plan your schedule ahead of time. Recognize that you can only do so much in a given period. Practice the notion of "the pace of grace."

Disarm Yourself. Every situation in life does not require you to be competitive or right or perfect. Adjust your approach to an event according to its demands. You don't have to raise your voice in a simple discussion. Playing tennis with a friend doesn't have to be an Olympic trial. Leave behind you "weapons" of shutting people out, having the last word, putting someone else down, and blaming. You can be right or happy – but you cant be both.

Quiet Time. Balance your family, social, and work demands with special private times. Hobbies are good antidotes for daily pressures. Unwind by taking a quiet stroll, soaking in a hot bath, watching a sunset, or listening to calming music. Life is like a bookshelf, don't let yours be so jammed that nothing else new matters.

Watch Your Habits. Eat sensibly - a balanced diet will provide all the necessary energy you will need during the day. Eat 5 colors with every meal. Remember the rule: Fluffy floaties - your diet is good, or stinky sinkies - your diet needs to change. Avoid nonprescription drugs and minimize your alcohol use – you need to be mentally and physically alert to deal with stress. Be mindful of the effects of excessive caffeine and sugar on nervousness. Put out the cigarettes - they restrict blood circulation and affect the stress response.

Talk to Friends. Friends can be good medicine. Daily doses of conversation, regular social engagements, and occasional sharing of deep feelings and thoughts can reduce stress quite nicely.

Stress Buster Bingo*

Instructions: Move around the room and search for people who practice the stress relieving activities described. Have the person sign his/her initials on the appropriate square. When you have initials in a row, column or on a diagonal, yell "Bingo." The same person can't sign your card more than once.

The Many Facets of Intimacy

One challenge for people may be to expand the concept of intimacy beyond the stereotype that our primary expression or experience of love or closeness is emotional or sexual. There are more possibilities for connecting intimately with others. The many facets of intimacy are offered to support our journey as humans to reach the fullness of our humanity and to fulfill the rich potential in all our relationships. You may find this list refreshing in the face of how the media stereotypes men and women into shallow relationships as portrayed on television, and in movies and consumer ads.

1. AESTHETIC Intimacy (sharing experiences of beauty)
2. COMMITMENT Intimacy (mutually derived from common self-investment)
3. COMMUNICATION Intimacy (talking and sharing, the source of all types of true intimacy)
4. CONFLICT Intimacy (facing and struggling with differences)
5. CREATIVE Intimacy (sharing acts of creating together)
6. CRISIS Intimacy (closeness in coping with problems and pain)
7. EMOTIONAL Intimacy (being tuned to each other's wavelength)
8. INTELLECTUAL Intimacy (closeness in the world of ideas)
9. SEXUAL Intimacy (erotic or orgasmic closeness)
10. SPIRITUAL Intimacy (the we-ness in sharing the meaning of life)
11. RECREATIONAL Intimacy (relating in the experiences of fun and play)
12. WORK Intimacy (the closeness of sharing common tasks)

DISCUSSION STARTERS:

Each facet of intimacy contains an invitation to explore a richer depth of relating.

Q. What combination of intimacies are important for a parent-child relationship to be healthy?

Q. What ways of sharing are important when dealing with others in the programs?

Q. What are the intimacies that are needed to nurture strong friendships?

Q. What facets of intimacy are necessary for a marriage or life-long partnership to thrive? Why?

The Next Step: What facets of intimacy are you now celebrating? Which new ways do you want to explore? Who would you like to share this list with?

Instructions: List all the people in your life that you share the following intimacies with. If you include yourself then list how or when you share this intimacy.

1. I share AESTHETIC Intimacy with:
2. I share COMMITMENT Intimacy with: etc,

CELEBRATE THE FOUR KINDS OF LOVE

STORGE: love between parents their children

PHILIA: love of friends and family

AGAPE: self giving love, altruistic compassion and charity

EROS: self taking love caused by desire and passion for another.

Appreciative Inquiry Interview Questions

1. BEST EXPERIENCE

Think about the most fulfilling and engaging time that you have worked in your role at your organization. Recall a time when you felt most alive or most excited about your involvement. Tell me a story about that time. What made it an exciting experience? Who was involved? Describe the event in detail.

2. VALUES

What do you value deeply? Specifically:

a. What do you value about yourself and your contribution to your organization.

b. What do you value about your organization?

3. LIFE GIVING CORE

What is the life giving core of being a professional working in your organization that allows it to pull through challenging times?

4. THREE WISHES

If you had three wishes for deeper fulfillment, satisfaction and engagement at work what would they be?

Work is Love Made Visible

And if you cannot work with love but only with distaste, it is better that you should leave your work and sit at the gate of the temple and take alms of those who work with joy. For if you bake bread with indifference, you bake a bitter bread that feeds but half our hunger.

– Kahlil Gibran, The Prophet

Seven Keys to Engaging People for Service Excellence

1. WELLNESS: Promote Healthy Choices

Our personal magnetism is influenced by our ability to manage all four dimensions of energy. How we stay on top of our game physically, emotionally, mentally and spiritually determines the power we have to invest inside and out.

INTERPRET YOUR SCORE

Score 15 to 35 – Disengaged or Disenchanted with low discretionary effort. Staff likely require steady external motivation to perform because their hearts are not fully engaged in what they do. Response: For short term limited results: Pay more, reward only stars, bribe with perks and incentives. Long term sustainable results: Dedicate proactive culture-shift training to inspire flexible leadership, team spirit, align deeper sense personal values with collective purpose, genuine communication strategies and resolve the heart of conflicts and collusions to clear the way for authentic emotional connections and loyalty.

Score 35 to 55 – Enrolled or Loosely Engaged but will slip when not watched. Moderate indication of awareness and contentment that their values of who they are is being expressed through what they are doing. Response: Concentrate custom staff development training on areas that require a boost. Start with programs to enhance the lowest scoring topics.

Score 55 to 75 – Overall Engaged and leadership can focus energy on building the organization, not managing the people. Response: Let the energy flow into quality customer service, patient care, program delivery or enhancing human resources. Leaders need to get out of the way and let the staff do what they love to do and were born to do – create, grow and serve.

Biography of Your Speaker

Peter is driven by his passion for helping people work together for the greater good. His tales and tools enrich relationships and promote productive attitudes that maximize the culture of human potential for service excellence.

Peter engages life with gusto, from his proud roots in small town Nova Scotia to trekking mountains on 3 continents. His international audiences are diverse, from Los Angeles gang members and community leaders in Northern Ireland to big-hearted professionals dedicated to helping others through corporate, public & non-profit organizations. Peter's uplifting speeches and peak performance seminars celebrate hard-working unsung heroes and renew and inspire big-hearted professionals to make a difference in and for the world.

His passion for empowering others began with a decade as an inner-city school teacher. Notable in his career as a training leader and speaker was five years as a public servant with the Nova Scotia Government's Family Violence Prevention Initiative. Peter has celebrated the joy of speaking and the business of making a difference since 1985.

He is co-author of the industry-acclaimed best-selling Healthy Relationships Curriculum, a violence prevention program for youth and the program director of Generation XXL, a Gemini Award nominated film exploring teenage obesity. In 1995, Peter was honoured with a Global Citizen Award from the Nova Scotia Chapter of the United Nations Association in Canada for his work in promoting peace. His expertise in healthy relationships has been featured in numerous television, radio, and print media interviews.

Peter has been quoted in Oprah Magazine, is living with Parkinson's disease and was proud to become a first-time Dad at age 50. Peter's energy comes from chocolate and his passion for helping people love who they are, who they're with and what they do with their talents in order to leave a job well-done and have more joy to take home to their healthy family.

Leadership and Self-Deception: Getting Out of the Box

How self-deception kills performance and what you can do about it.

(Disponible en Francais)

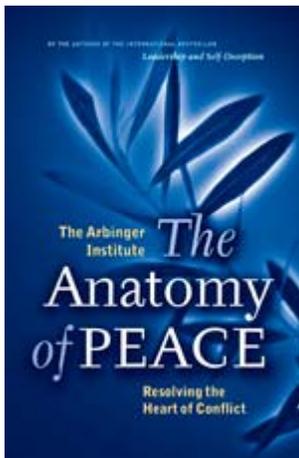

For too long, the issue of self-deception has been the realm of deep-thinking philosophers, academics, and scholars working on the central questions of the human sciences. The public remains generally unaware of the issue. That would be fine except that self-deception is so pervasive it touches every aspect of life. "Touches" is perhaps too gentle a word to describe its influence. Self-deception actually determines one's experience in every aspect of life. The extent to which it does that, and in particular the extent to which it is the central issue in leadership, is the subject of this book.

Arbinger's best-selling books provide an excellent introduction to the problem of self-deception and how to deal with it.

Anatomy of Peace: Resolving the Heart of Conflict

See people as people and stop perpetuating the problems we are trying to solve.

What if in our conflicts with others there is something we want more than solutions? What if conflicts at home, conflicts at work, and conflicts in the world stem from the same root cause? And what if individually and collectively we systematically misunderstand that cause, and unwittingly perpetuate the very problems we think we are trying to solve? These are among the important questions explored in The Anatomy of Peace.

Through an intriguing story of parents who are struggling with their children and problems that have come to consume their lives, we learn from once bitter enemies the way to find peace whenever war is upon us. Yusuf al-Falah, an Arab, and Avi Rozen, a Jew, each lost their fathers at the hands of the other's ethnic cousins. The Anatomy of Peace is a story of how they came together, how they help warring parents and children to come together, and how we too can find our way out of the struggles that weigh us down.

While Leadership and Self-Deception focuses on the workplace, The Anatomy of Peace explores the freeing and surprising implications of these ideas in all aspects of life. In addition, while Leadership and Self-Deception explored how to solve self-deception in oneself, The Anatomy of Peace goes beyond, and explores how to spread that solution among others.
